On high autumn mountains...

When the days get shorter, the air crisper, the food richer and the colours more intense it is autumn in the Norwegian mountains. A great season for hikes before the winter comes and to gather inside, when cold rain drums against the windows. Wonderful mountain lodges give shelter and make you feel home after a day of freshness and activity.

Norwegians call it “kos” when instant happiness fills the heart, because you feel safe, warm and good together.

Norway`s Sustainable Destination Portrait

Lindesnes – at the southernmost tip of Norway

Charming, white-painted wooden houses, relaxing beaches and plenty of nature activities present this region of Southern Norway as the epitome of coastal life.

In Lindesnes you find Norway's oldest lighthouse, where you fully can experience the elements. Lindesnes also offers meeting facilities for events and conferences as well.

Another star of the region is Europe's first underwater restaurant "Under" (which both means "wonder" and "under" in Norwegian). It exposes you to the wonders beneath the sea, functions as an artificial reef and serves high class dishes harvested and made from the surrounding sea.

Incredible, huge, and breathtaking – these descriptions apply to the fjords of Norway. In autumn, they even get mystical, and everything slows down here. The right time to take a break, expose yourself to energetic activities, cultural encounters and with incredible local food delicacies.

If you promote Norway and offer travel programmes to Norway you might be interested in our SoMe activities and more information about our “Break from the Great” campaign. You will also find a collection of photos to use for free.

Travel Advice

We have noticed several travellers at the Norwegian border with the wrong vaccination certificate. Please spread the word: Travellers to Norway need a valid digital EU-Covid certificate for entry, and from the UK and Wales a digital NHS Covid Pass.

Check for latest updates regularly on our info page on VisitNorway.com, as they change often these days.
