

AMONG THE BEST IN GASTRONOMY AND IN SPORTS

What do sports and cuisine have in common in Slovenia? In both fields, Slovenians win laurels and the hearts of fans (and foodies). Four new stars have joined the Michelin constellation. And new champions have been crowned at sports venues.

When speaking about high-quality cuisine, we cannot overlook hard-working local producers who play major role in providing top ingredients for superb dishes. When speaking about elite sports, we cannot overlook the fact that Slovenians have sports in their genes. If you combine this with diverse natural landscapes and excellent training conditions for a wide range of activities, you quickly understand why Slovenians rock in so many different sports.

If you visit Slovenia this September, make sure to combine both: active and gourmet experiences. Feel how they intertwine as you cycle along wine roads and stop at some of the best locals inns and restaurants.

Also, make sure to read the remarkable story of two Slovenian women who inspire the world – sports climber Janja Garnbret and chef Ana Roš – and discover numerous parallels which connect sports and gastronomy.

SLOVENIA: THE LAND OF CHAMPIONS

Sports is what unites Slovenians: we like to be active and we like to cheer for our top athletes. No wonder that a special holiday has been dedicated to sports. We celebrate it on 23 September.

IT'S TIME FOR CYCLING AMONG VINEYARDS

It's cheerful in vineyards in September, as this is the time of harvest. Here's a great tip from us: cycle along wine roads and vineyards and take in some of this joyous atmosphere.
